The river survey began in March, when the first teams set out from the northern station with enough supplies for three weeks and a plan to reach every site before the water rose. Most of them made it back on time.

The second season was shorter, and the teams worked closer to the station, which meant less time on the road and more time at each site.

A third season is planned for next year.